UPDATE: AT&T AND PG&E UTILITY RELOCATION EXTENDED ON FIRST/FREMONT STREETS

May – September 2010

We want to update our neighbors on the independent utility relocation work underway in the project area. As you are aware, PG&E and AT&T have been moving some of their existing utilities on First and Fremont Street in preparation for the construction of the Transbay Transit Center before relocation of City-owned utilities later this year. AT&T utility relocation is scheduled to continue on First Street through June 2010. PG&E work on First Street is scheduled to begin in late June and continue through September 2010. PG&E's ongoing work on Fremont Street will continue through mid-August 2010.

Intermittent lane closures are expected during this time and are the responsibility of the independent utility companies.

This work is being performed independently of the TJPA by the private companies on their own utility lines in order to make room for TJPA's construction of the New Transit Center this year. If any questions or concerns arise during this effort, please contact the companies directly:
